Still Your Money

The crowning absurdity of what was supposed to have been a taxpavers' revolt at the polls last November is found in the probability that local and state taxes would have offset federal tax reduction anyway.

Even had there been a reduction in federal taxes beginning this year, the saving to taxpayers would have been more than offset by increases in state and local taxes. The only thing which has been holding back an upward surge in these imposts is the fact they are closely controlled by taxpayers who have nothing to spare when Washington is through taking its share.

A casual survey of potential increases in state taxes here in Ohio by Associated Press reveals between 50 and 60 million dollars' worth of additional tax burdens waiting for legislative approval. This would be added to an $831 million state budget. There is no point of satiety in either state or federal government.

The only protection taxpayers have is their own determination to hold public spending within reaching distance of public means. This entails close vigilance over all proposed laws and insistence that every proposal for increased spending must be matched by a companion proposal for increased taxing. In most cases, that will be enough to insure its defeat.

Caesar's Wife

The obvious thing about the resignation of C. Wesley Roberts as Republican national chairman is the fact there is something not obvious about the Kansas political pressure which forced him out of office.

This seems a good time to remember something that no one was forgetting before the presidential election last November - that some of the quarrels inside the Republican party are even hotter than the GOP quarrel with the

There even may be a connection between the pressure which has cracked up the GOP headquarters organization within months of its success in an election and the pressure applied against Secretary of State Dulles as the key member of President Eisenhower's cabinet.

There is a factional struggle for power inside the Republican party-the same kind of a struggle still going on inside the Democratic party, though that one now is out of the news and out of mind.

When it turned out that Chairman Roberts once had done something back in Kansas which made him vulnerable to attack by his enemies. that was the end of his usefulness to the Eisenhower administration. A national chairman, like Caesar's wife, must be above reproach, even if the reproach be political in motive. To those who say the Roberts incident proves there is no substantial difference between Democrats and Republicans in the matter of questionable dealings, it seems sufficient to point out that Roberts' resignation was automatically forthcoming and automatically accepted as soon as Roberts' reputation was clouded.

You Are The Judge

If President Eisenhower were to explain his policy about keeping peace with Congress, he would destroy what he is trying to do.

The outcome of his experiment must be judged by public opinion. The experiment is to see whether or not this government of balanced power is in good working order.

If it is, President Eisenhower will win legislative support by commanding legislative confidence. That is his experiment - to see if he can command confidence by refusing to be baited into a word battle with his congressional critics. Few presidents have resisted that

Harry Truman jumped at every chance to fight with Congress. Congress jumped at every chance to pick fights with Mr. Truman. Bickering, snarling and snapping became a way of political life in Washington and voters grew

Gen. Eisenhower has not chosen so far to bicker, snarl, or snap. He evidently believes if he holds his tongue and proves to congressmen that he recognizes their right to stand or fall in public esteem without White House interference, there will be no political percentage in trying to pick fights with the White House.

The percentage will disappear only to the extent that the fight-pickers fail to find popular backing. Whether you are a Republican, a Democrat, or an in-between, you reached a judgment during the Bohlen case. If you decided that President Eisenhower and his allies, including Sen. Taft, earned credit for their behavior, a historic experiment in keeping peace with Congress by refusing to be baited into a word battle turned out successfully for the White House.

Some young men are finding the old advice about avoiding a draft pretty unhealthy.

If folks weren't always in a hurry, we'll bet not half as many shoestrings would break.

Spiritual Diary for Lent

The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. -James 5:16

Lord, what a change within us one short hour Spent in Thy presence will prevail to make-What heavy burdens from our bosoms take, What parched grounds refresh, as with a shower. -Richard C. Trench

Today's Message

"Come ye apart with me and pray." These words of our Lord might properly become a universal theme for the season called Lent. For fundamentally Lent is not a time only for self-denial. It is a time for self-reconstruction and self-strengthening.

The pressure of "things" has become so heavy in the lives of most of us that we are apt to forget that there are mental and spiritual forces which are of greater power than things material. The practical person is apt to dismiss intangible things as being largely useless, But it is only when we become confused in mind and divided in our spiritual life-for we have one whether we admit it or not-that life becomes overwhelming and fearsome.

We need, each of us individually, and all of us collectively, to withdraw for a time from the pressure of things and regain our spiritual balance that we may come forth again as masters and not slaves

"Come ye apart with me and pray."

-HERBERT V. HARRIS St. Luke's of the Mountains Episcopal Church, La Crescenta, Calif. Today's Prayer

O God of Peace, lift us, we pray Thee to Thy presence, where we may be still and know that Thou art God; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

instructed to work directly with Gen. Clark and Gen. Taylor in the field. A simple directive could be issued that all normal operational instructions for the Pentagon requested by the chief of staff for Korean operations, so far as supplies are concerned would be honored promptly by the civilian secretaries and by the heads of the armed services in Washington. It would be a direct way to get action for the commanders in Korea and there probaby would not be another ammunition scandal if the plan were adopted. One reason for the inadequate setup today is that the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff are necessarily occupied with duties involving America's armed services all over the world. They cannot concentrate on Korea. Here are some excerpts from the Senate Armed Services Committee testimony of a few days ago which tell the tragic story of confusion in our command setup: "Gen. Collins, chief of staff of the U.S. Army: We are literally fighting a war in peacetime or what is supposed to be peacetime. This is something unprecedented in American history. We have been mobilizing, fighting a large - scale war, and demobilizing, all at the same time. "Sen. Byrd: What would have happened to the ammunition we don't seem to have now if there had been a real all-out war all through this period? "Gen. Collins: Well, the ammunition was perhaps one of the factors. . . . I would say that in accordance with the national policy during the period of the 'armistice' there has been no offensives directed by the Eighth Army. That is not a military decision, you un-

TWENTY FIVE YEARS AGO - Eddie Stinson and George Haldeman descended on the Jacksonville, Fla., beach today after setting a new world's record for sustained aerial flight. The fliers took the air at 7:37 a. m. Wednesday and officially established a new record at 13 seconds past 1 o'clock, EST. The old time of 52 hours and 23 minutes was held by German

FORTY YEARS AGO - Of the many important matters to claim the attention of the city council Tuesday evening, was the condition of affairs at Centennial Park, where the rapid death and destruction by high winds of a large number of the trees there has been for some time a matter of deep concern to those most interested in keeping this beauty spot in the very best of shape.

815 Bills Await Ohio Legislature

No New Taxes On Public Foreseen

COLUMBUS, O. (P)-The Ohio Legislature has before it the tools to do the job. The House has in its hopper the largest number of bills in 57 years.

Topping all records since 1896, the House total of bills Monday Swelled by 155 to hit a total of 815.

Five bills were introduced in the Senate to bring the 100th General Assembly's total to 998-41 bills short of the total in the 99th. Enough Senate bills possibly will be offered to surpass the modern day record of the 98th which had 1.074.

The Senate generally ignores any deadline on bill introduction. But Monday was the House dead-

ON A PRECARIOUS perch atop the rudder of a B-29, a maintenance worker repairs antenna of the bomber in Tokyo. Twin .50-cal. machine guns add a grim touch to the picture.

EVEN A GOOD MUDDER would find the track too rugged in Korea where spring rains have turned the terrain into a muddy mass. Two Koreans are trying to remove their load before they get some help in digging out their half-buried horse.

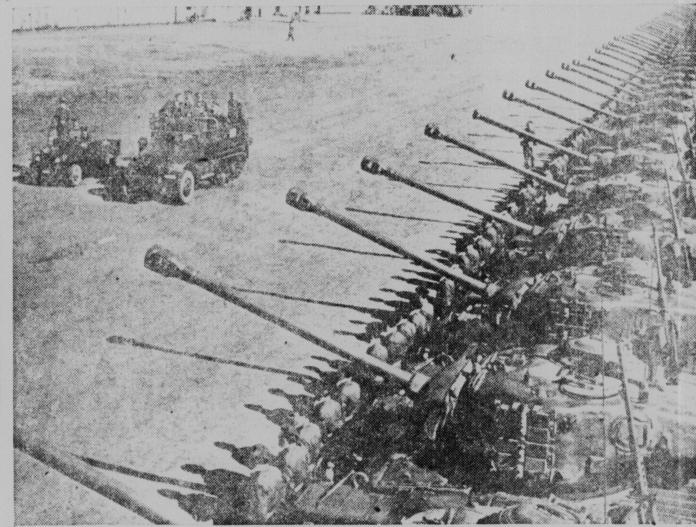

TRAFFIC RULES are made for small fry drivers too, as Brian Dunne finds out when he parks his car too close to a fire plug in New York. The car, created solely for youngsters, is 62 inches long. The auto is powered by an electric motor.

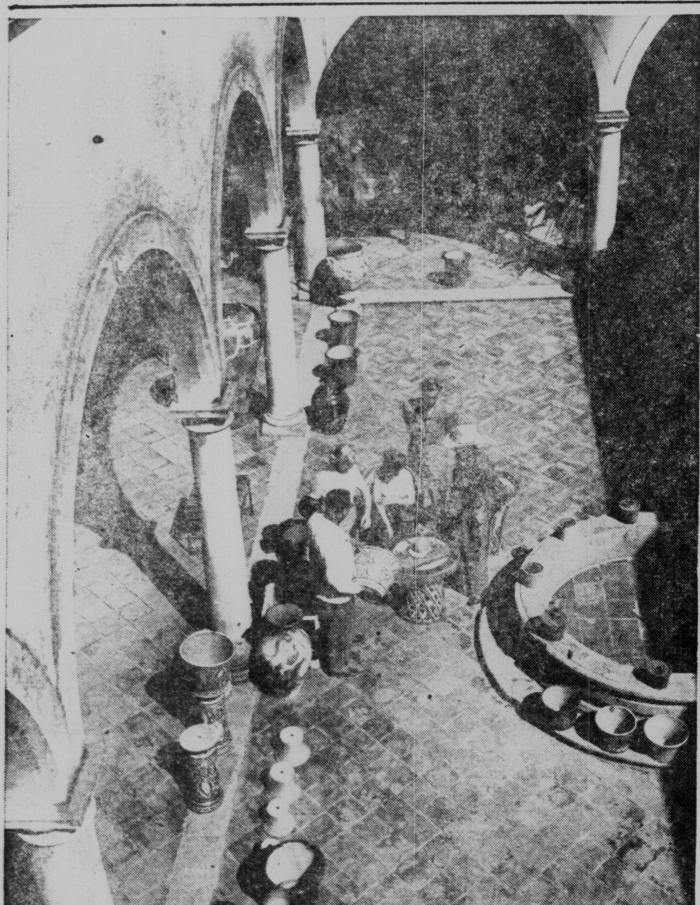

ELECTRIC TRAIN owned by John Walther of Oconomowoc, Wis., stops for red lights, passengers and-a squirrel. Flip, the squirrel, isn't content to be a spectator. He buries nuts in the tunnels, steals items from the flat cars and sometimes even causes a minor train wreck.

IT'S NO soft soap to say Martha Wright is tops when it comes to beautiful hair. The musical comedy star, by "washing that man right out of her hair," wins the "Crowning Glory" award for scalp hygiene from National Hair Treatment foundation.

LINED UP AT ATTENTION, two armored divisions display their equipment to military attaches accredited to the Italian government at a review in Verona. The tanks are Patton M-47s.

Tourists from all over the world come to admire and buy the wares of Tlaquepaque artisans. Human figures, horses and wild animals are made out of clay. Potter puts finishing touches on one of the huge urns. The designs show originality of artist.

FEAT OF CLAY

W/HILE CHILDREN of other lands make mud pies to pass W the hours, youngsters in Tlaquepaque, Mexico, like to play with clay. This is understandable, because the ancient suburb of Guadalajara turns out pottery that is not equalled anywhere else in the world. Each potter is a craftsman who transforms clay into Deautifully-carved Grecian urns, Indian masks, Persian jars and other sculptured pieces. The designs and colorings used by these artists in making their articles of pottery have attracted a heavy flow of tourists to the town. The potters are almost all natives of Tlaquepaque and have inherited both knowledge and tools from their great-greatgrandfathers. Aside from the full-time potters, practically all of the suburb's families are busy fashioning hand-made pottery on a small scale. And, like good artisans anywhere, they admire their handiwork by displaying it in their homes.
